An Echo from the Boer War.

LOTENI, P.O.A.,

via Nottingham, NATAL,

9th Nov., 1903.

The Blickensderfer Typewriter Co.,
Newcastle-on-Tyne.

Dear Sirs,

I am writing this on a No. 5 Blick, which, four years ago I left in Krugersdorp, when I was put over the border by the Boers. The machine was soon after commandeered for official use and taken to the head laager before Ladysmith, where it was used in producing many documents that have since become historic. Later it accompanied the Staff of President Kruger, until captured by the British, who used it. At last it wandered back to its old district, where one of the first users of it recognised it by its number--19546, and was the means of my recovering it two months ago. To my astonishment it was so little the worse that in half an hour I was using it, and as you can see by this specimen, it has many years' life in it yet. I am writing this to ease my conscience, because when I first saw a BLICK I thought and said it was a feeble toy. For that hasty pre-judgment I now make amends, for a machine that can survive such a rough-and-tumble experience among heavy-handed Boers, and its many bumpy journeys over the veld, and then turn up fit for duty after nearly four years, deserves the profoundest respect and admiration. There is only one thing that has astonished me more than the marvellous simplicity and sturdiness of the BLICK, that is, that anybody should buy a more expensive machine.

Yours truly,

(Signed) DOUGLAS BLACKBURN.

THE POCKET DARK ROOM

A beautifully finished device which is small enough to be carried in the pocket, with which anyone can develop films or plates in daylight or any light anywhere.

No need of any experience of developing. No more groping about in the dark. No ruby lamp, developing dishes, or glass measures. The Pocket Dark Room takes one ounce only of developer, which is prepared by the simple addition of water to our special developing powders. A rubber bulb is supplied with the apparatus for the purpose of applying the developer. Every exposure is developed separately under observation and the fullest possible control.

Write for particulars of this great photographic novelty to the Sole Manufacturers,

The enemy had formed an ambush at Korn Spruit, and before their presence was discovered by the main body had captured the greater portion of the baggage column and five out of the six guns of the leading battery. When the alarm was given, Q Battery, Royal Horse Artillery, was within 300 yards of the spruit. Major Phipps Hornby, who commanded it, at once wheeled about and moved off at a gallop under a very heavy fire. One gun upset when a wheel horse was shot, and had to be abandoned, together with a waggon, the horses of which were killed. The remainder of the battery reached a position close to some unfinished railway buildings and came into action 1,150 yards from the spruit, remaining in action until ordered to retire. When the order to retire was received Major Phipps Hornby ordered the guns and their limbers to be run back by hand to where the teams of uninjured horses stood behind the unfinished buildings. The few remaining gunners, assisted by a number of officers and men of a party of Mounted Infantry, and directed by Major Phipps Hornby and Captain Humphreys, the only remaining officers of the battery, succeeded in running back four of the guns under shelter. One or two of the limbers were similarly withdrawn by hand, but the work was most severe and the distance considerable. In consequence all concerned were so exhausted that they were unable to drag in the remaining limbers or the fifth gun. It now became necessary to risk the horses, and volunteers were called for from amongst the drivers, who readily responded. Several horses were killed, and men wounded, but at length only one gun and one limber were left exposed. Four separate attempts were made to rescue these, but when no more horses were available the attempt had to be given up and the gun and limber were abandoned. Meanwhile the other guns had been sent on, one at a time, and after passing within 700 or 800 yards of the enemy, in rounding the head of a donga and crossing two spruits they eventually reached a place of safety, where the battery was re-formed. After full consideration of the circumstances of the case the Field Marshal Commanding in Chief in South Africa formed the opinion that the conduct of all ranks of Q Battery, Royal Horse Artillery, was conspicuously gallant and daring, but that all were equally brave and devoted in their behaviour. He, therefore, decided to treat the case of the battery as one of collective gallantry under Rule 13 of the Victoria Cross Warrant, and directed that one officer should be selected for the decoration of the Victoria Cross by the officers, one non-commissioned officer by the non-commissioned officers, and two gunners or drivers by the gunners and drivers. A difficulty arose with regard to the officer, owing to the fact that there were only two unwounded officers—Major Phipps Hornby and Captain Humphreys—available for the work of saving the guns, and both of these had been conspicuous by their gallantry and by the fearless manner in which they exposed themselves, and each of them nominated the other for the decoration. It was ultimately decided in favour of Major Phipps Hornby as having been the senior concerned."
